Zo's world is another of the spheres that exist in the infinite multiverse. A world, discovered by a young boy, named Theodor who, fleeing a hurricane, ended up being transported to this one. His testimony was collected in the book Travel Between Worlds. Book of anonymous authorship, but generally attributed to the mages Istredd of Aedd Gynvael or the eccentric Elias Von Drexel.

Geography

Theodor described this world as a very monotonous and boring one with an almost flat geography, only accompanied by a few slight hills, and from time to time, variations of the typical northern forest, combined with a landscape more similar to what one would find in Toussaint, the only thing is that with hardly any animals of any kind.

Civilization

The only sign of civilization on that world, it seemed, was only a series of paths made of tiles of different materials, all leading to the same place. A city, nicknamed The Argentean City.

People

During his stay in that world, Theodor met several people who, for the same reason as he did, were traveling to The Argentean City, to return home. They had heard from merchant that if they went to that place, since they were lost beings, they would find a way to return to their worlds thanks to the help of a powerful being, called Zo (speculated a chrome dragon) But the truth was that the city was in ruins and the inhabitants of this world were cannibals. Everything related to Zo was a trap. And they were about to be devoured, when just at that moment, another hurricane appeared and made them disappear from that world.

Notable people

- Cannibals
- Zo (supposedly)
- Theodor
- Theodor's Group

Notable locations

- The Argentean City

Hurricane phenomena

The phenomenon of the hurricane that transports to other worlds, it could have been a hurricane that emerged in semi-mythical Paristan, which eventually reached the Northern Kingdoms and ended up transporting young Theodor, other people, animals and objects to other worlds. But although there is a record of a hurricane in the northern kingdoms during the 12th century, there is no record of it possessing any magical ability.
